Taser suspends contract with company Taser International has suspended its contract with a major supplier over a number of controversial matters, including allegations that the company sold guns to dealers who illegally sold them on the streets in Arizona. The Phoenix-based company, which makes electroshock weapons for police, said it was suspending its contract with the Canadian company Electro Drive Inc over a number of issues that included the sale of handguns to the public. "Taser International and Electro Drive Inc will suspend further work on current projects and contract negotiations pending resolution of this matter and have provided Electro Drive Inc with the opportunity to contest the allegations," the company said in a statement. The company said it would provide advance notice of suspension to Electro Drive Inc and would pay for any inventory costs related to projects currently under contract. Taser said it would "take the necessary steps to ensure that any agreements entered into are executed in compliance with applicable laws and regulations." The company, which saw its shares rise over 1.5 percent, declined to elaborate on the allegations but said it would review reports from the police and the Arizona Attorney General's Office as well as any other reports in order to determine whether any laws had been violated. "Taser looks forward to the opportunity to share details as the investigation proceeds," the company said. Taser's press release came on the same day that the company announced that it had fired seven employees over the Arizona allegations, and said it had hired a law firm to look into the matter. Taser said it was made aware of the possible sale by a law enforcement agency in April and May. Taser said it "immediately launched an investigation into the matter" and hired Counselor Law Firm and a law firm in Arizona for the investigation. Taser said it fired the employees immediately because of "the serious allegations and the apparent interference with the investigation." The firm Counselor Law Firm said it was appointed to conduct a criminal investigation into the matter on behalf of the law enforcement agency that reported the possible sale. "Based on all the evidence available to it, the law enforcement agency determined that the firearm had not been sold by any of its officers and was not made available for sale to the public," the law firm said. The company said it was cooperating with the investigation and may take further action at the conclusion of the investigation
